

CRITICISM NOT SO SEVERE

Roosevelt has More Praise Than Ridicule for Oklahoma's Constitution.--His Comments Quite Different From Secretary Taft's.

By Willis J. Abbott.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—In discussing with a friend his determination to issue the proclamation granting statehood to Oklahoma, President Roosevelt said certain things that are much at odds with the reports of his views on the matter. For example, that much berated "gerrymander."

Mr. Roosevelt looked upon this from the standpoint of a practical man. He remarked that it might be bad, but it could not be as bad as some with which he had had experience in New York, and had had knowledge of in other northern republican states. Nor did he express any objection to the initiative and referendum clause in the constitution, that feature which the unfortunate Taft attacked and then fled to Asia, where the people don't take any part in governing themselves. My informant tells me—we can't quote the president directly, you know—that Mr. Roosevelt approves the system of direct legislation for cities, counties and state, but fears it is too cumbersome for the nation.

Nor did the president, in this interview, express any of that hostility to the constitutional prohibition of government by injunction, which Secretary Taft attacked so bitterly. People here in Washington are wondering whether Taft was sent out to test public sentiment on this issue, or whether he was merely dispatched like a lamb to the slaughter.

All that Roosevelt has said to the first score men who talked to him upon the subject today has been in direct contradiction of all that Secretary Taft said in his ill-advised speech, a speech the substance of which the president must have known before its delivery. Certain of the constitution's provisions, the president applauds unreservedly, notably that prohibiting campaign funds from corporations, and that compelling candidates for office to make sworn statements as to their expenses for any perjury committed.

Among those who saw the president today was F. S. Monett of Ohio, whose long fight on the Standard Oil company has made him a national figure. Mr. Monett told the president that part of the republican disaster in Oklahoma was due to the subservience of the rough rider governor to the Standard Oil interests. Without criticizing Governor Frantz, Mr. Roosevelt is said to have expressed the opinion that there might have been a more vigorous campaign against the "octopus."

If the official copy of the constitution and report of the election are re-pressed starts on his trip to the mid-west will be issued at once. Otherwise ceived at the white house before the die west, the proclamation of state-it may be delayed until the middle of October.

The pressure for place has begun already. One of the first callers at the White House was former Senator James K. Jones of Arkansas, who urged the appointment of Judge Thomas C. Humphreys of Oklahoma to the federal bench when the territory shall be made a state.

Lumber Companies Fined.

Guthrie, Sept. 28.—On indictments charging entering into a combination in restraint of trade, pleas of guilty were made yesterday at Pond Creek in the federal court by the Minnetonka Lumber Company, the Gloyd Lumber Company and Crowell Bros. Lumber Company, all of Alva, and each company paid into court a fine of $2,000 and costs. The cases were transferred to Pond Creek on a change of venue from Woods county, the indictments being under the Sherman anti-trust law. These are the first convictions under the law in Oklahoma.

The indictments are also pending against lumber companies at Newkirk and Guthrie. The Amsden company is owned partially by Wichita, Kans., parties. United States District Attorney John Embry prosecuted the cases.

Guthrie, Sept. 27.—The republicans accompany the president on his Louisiana hunting trip. I will accompany tests, which were to have been made on the president from Keokuk, Iowa, to the ground of irregularities in the re-St. Louis. Then I will return home and get things in shape to turn over the Territorial administration to the newly elected state officers."

No fight will be made to prevent officers elected by the voters from entering upon their duties as soon as Oklahoma has been proclaimed a state by President Roosevelt.

This is virtually the announcement made by Governor Frank Frantz here tonight. He said:

"It is my opinion that the newspaper reports that President Roosevelt has promised to sign the constitution are true. I have called off a several days' visit with the National Guard, Memphis and accompany him to Louisiana, now in camp at Fort Reno, and will not

GRAND JURY'S SECOND REPORT.

Fifteen More "True Bills" Found—
Nine for Disposing.

Late Friday afternoon the grand jury brought into court its second report, which may be summarized as follows:

"No bill" found in the following U. S. commissioner's cases:

Tom Kellar, introducing.

Lee McCallar, introducing.

Richard Maxwell, introducing.

Albert Calhoun and Lee Calhoun, introducing.

C. O. Waltham, larceny.

"True bill found in referred case 740, U. S. vs. Houston Madden and Frank Ragan, for disposing liquor.

"True bills" found in following U. S. cases:

Will T. Watson, introducing.

Tom Birdwell and Blake Allen, murder.

Gid Breco, murder.

Following "original true bills" found: (which include two indictments for "nuisance, gaming house," and nine for disposing of intoxicating liquor.)

Decrees of divorce were granted in two cases in the afternoon, viz: Valentine Keifer vs. J. S. Kiefer and W. T. Robbins vs. Rollie Robbins.

In the damage suit of Cassie Coyle vs. W. J. Reed, the jury returned a verdict of $125 for the plaintiff, who had asked in her petition for $2,000.

A small civil case entitled I. D. Nichols vs. Wm. Hendricks, was tried and left with the jury by Judge Dickerson who left with his home in Chickasha last night. Should the jury reach a verdict they would return it to the clerk, sealed, and be discharged. But the jury seems to be hung hopelessly, in which case they must remain together till court convenes Monday morning. The foreman, M. Johnson, applied to Deputy Clerk Constant this afternoon to have a preacher detailed to hold services with the jury Sunday.

Woman Gets Judgment Against W. J. Reed for Damages.

A very sensational case occurred in the district court yesterday, W. J. Reed, founder of Ada and prominent merchant and real estate owner at present, being sued for damages by one woman Cassie Coyle, who some time ago conducted a rooming house in one of Reed's Main street buildings. Miss Cassie Coyle sued this merchant for $2,000.00 damages, claiming she was maliciously beaten, knocked down and rendered unconscious by him. The woman plaintiff in this case testified that Reed came to her rooming house with two women, and asked for a room for himself and one of the women and another room for the other woman and another man, to which the woman plaintiff declared she objected, whereupon, Mr. Reed became enraged and assaulted her with serious results from which she was confined to her room for several days. To indicate further that Mr. Reed came to her rooming house with immoral intentions, Cassie Coyle further swore that Reed entered her place with the women by the rear stairway. It appears that it was proven by Mr. Reed that women with whom he went to the rooming house, had the definite mission of inspecting the furniture, and the ladies accompanying him, and further craftily threatened to phone Reed's wife, and attributed to Reed immoral conduct. Reed declared that when she did this he declared if she said what she threatened, she would say what was untrue, and that when he had remarked so much, the Coyle woman struck him in the face, whereupon he became involuntarily very angry and before he thought returned the blow in the face.

It appeared that the woman swore that she had been warned by the City Marshal Mitchell not to allow Reed in her place, and that she had not struck him and further that Reed had unmercifully assaulted her, from effects of which she was bruised and suffered greatly for several days. To the woman's allegations, three witnesses testified that Reed and his company did not go up the rear stairway. The mayor of the town at the time of the occurrence testified that he had seen the defendant immediately after the occurrence, that he did have a red spot on his face. Lem Mitchell declared that he had never advised the woman to keep Reed from her premises, and further testified that the plaintiff's reputation for chastity was not good. In whole, the burden of the evidence seemed to show that the defendant had spoken the truth in all of his allegations and that in all probability the woman was playing for the full feminine advantage usually extended.

But there appears to be something about an American and especially a Southern jury, which does not permit a man to strike a woman, no matter what the provocation, and further it is generally adjudged that when a man, no matter on account of what misfortune or accident, gets himself in the wrong boat with a woman, he is the one who must swim out, and thus the jury after being out for some time returned a verdict for the plaintiff, giving judgment for $125, being something less than $2,000 but enough to warn a man Thou shalt not strike a woman.

The speeches by the attorneys in the case to the jury, all of whom remained in their seats until the close, fairly reeked with oratory. J. W. Bolen, representing the defendant, Reed, drew a very feeling contrast between a lady and a woman who would abandon that proper and exalted position erected for her by man, and descend to become a loud and common brawler. The plaintiff was represented by that lately associated strong firm of lawyers, Stone and Huffar. All who heard acclaimed that Mr. Stone made an exceptionally strong and feeling argument. The case was closed by Judge Huffar, in one of the most unrelenting arraignments of a man who would strike a woman and of the maligner of woman's character, ever heard in an Ada court.

It was a hard fought case, and most certainly it is hoped that such character of cases will ever be few in our courts.

Electric Clocks in Vienna.

From Kansas City Journal.

Electric clocks, regulated from a central station, are being installed in various prominent positions throughout Vienna. In most instances they are fixed on the wall electric light mast, at the intersections of the principal streets. Each clock has four dials, which have no figures for the hours, but, instead, black squares for the III, VI, IX and XII, and black strokes for the intermediate hours.

Lake of Waterloo.

The lake of Waterloo is a phosphorescent sheet of water 1,000 feet long, near Nassau, in the Bahamas. At night it is like a sheet of living fire if any wind is stirring to ruffle its surface. If the night be calm the water lies dark and still until some object sets it in motion. Little colored boys are paid to swim out in the lake, where they seem to be clothed in garments of flame, leaving a long trail of molten splendor behind them.

The Parnells to Leave.

The News joins the numerous other friends of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Parnell in hoping it may not be true, the report that they may soon leave Ada to become residents of Sulphur; hoping, on the contrary, that these popular people may continue to reside among us and conduct the Harris Hotel, now famous among the traveling public for its excellent accommodations.

Though Mr. Parnell does not say positively that he will leave Ada, he admits that he has taken a lease on the Artesian, Sulphur's magnificent hotel, and will soon assume full management of same.

The News man was down at Sulphur the other day, and was complimenting his friend—that splendid town builder, Clay Webster—on the many recent additions of value to that town, much of it attributed to the latter's genius and enterprise. By no means the least of Mr. Webster's good strokes is his inducing E. E. Parnell to take charge of the Artesian. This hotel is a $100,000 structure, one of the handsomest in all Oklahoma and the biggest attraction, except the mineral waters, in Sulphur. The success with which the great inn is conducted will in large measure determine the popularity of the springs. Mr. Parnell will make good. When he and Mrs. Parnell move away Ada will lose one of its most gentlemanly and progressive citizens and one of its most estimable women.

"O. Hobart Lingillet--Representing a Door-knob Firm"

"What's your time?" asked D. Hobart Lingillet of the only other occupant of the smoker. Mr. Lingillet was sorry for a man who preferred "taking from" and "adding to" in a note book to being entertained by such a general favorite in society as himself. D. Hobart was a "regular case" when he got started. It looked promising when the other man closed his book with a frown. Mr. Lingillet was ready with a cigar.

"No, thanks," declined the man. "I believe you asked me what my line is? Why, I'm with the—"

"Mine's door-knobs," interrupted D. Hobart. "L. G. Turner & Co. Fine people to be with—treat you white. I've been with 'em now going on two years, and I couldn't ask for better treatment. Had lots of chances to go with other concerns, but My Firm wouldn't hear of it. Funny part of it is I'm independent as a pig on ice. I say what I think, whether it's to the Boss or anyone else. And I get away with it, too. Why, L. G. and the stockholders will take anything from me! Now, for instance, I said to the Boss, 'Look a' here—'

"Going? What's your rush? 'Night. Turning in myself soon."

"Surely fellow that," remarked Mr. Lingillet to a young man who just entered. "Can't draw him out. One of those cranks that go around the world and only speak to officials and waiters. I believe you can learn a lot talking to people."

"Why, I can make friends anywhere. I attribute my business success to this quality. Everything in knowing how to handle people—for you can't deal with any two men alike. I meet some tough proposido this evening, come on with me to call on a couple of girls—sisters—I know in this burg. Their names are Mabel and Ethel Davis. Very pretty, especially Ethel."

"I couldn't leave town without dropping up to see you, Miss Arnold," said D. Hobart, as he settled down for a pleasant evening. "Say, you're looking simply great! Some people improve and grow handsome all the time. No, I'm not a flatterer. Guess you don't know me—and what a hard man I am to please. I don't care much for girls as a general rule. The average girl makes me tired. But you're exceptional—you can understand a chap. I tell you it means a lot to have a little sympathetic understanding to a man knocking about the world as I am and continually thrown among strangers. When I strike Buffalo and can come up here, it's an inspiration to me for weeks afterward."

"You'll be glad to hear I've done a smashing old business this trip, and I expect things will be softened up for me a whole lot the coming year. I've never before been in a position where I could be fixed just as I'd want to be and have a place of my own, with automobiles and all that sort of thing—but it's coming now!"

"Have you any objection to my calling you Belle? I feel as if I had always known you, though I admit our acquaintance hasn't been of very long standing. Still—if you really like a person—you get better acquainted with 'em in ten minutes than with others in ten years."

"As I've said before, I don't care a rap for girls. Of course you are an exceptional girl. A little girl I know

"I can't toady to anyone, even for my own interests."

"That's the way I get on so well with some of my customers that the other man who used to have my route couldn't get near. One of my best customers is called the biggest crank on earth, and I admit I did have a time winning him. But, say—there isn't anything that man wouldn't do for me to-day. I found out his weak point was horses, and I just played up on that strong. Why, I soon had him sewed up tighter than a drum."

"Say," interrupted Johnson, "you know Miss Brookings that you introduced me to—"

"Oh, Gertie?" put in Lingillet. "Why I haven't seen Gert for quite awhile. I cut it out some time ago. I told her not to feel too bad about it—that some one would come along she'd did me. Of course I couldn't see

D. Hobart Lingillet's "Little Girl Back Home."

Gertie seriously. Jess is the real works. Others are mere incidents. Here she is in my watch. When I get ready to settle down—what's the matter? What? You engaged to Gertie? Well, well! The idea. Say, old man, I'm glad to hear it! Of course, I never knew Miss Brookings very well—but she seemed a terribly nice girl. Hope you'll be happy, old man. Remember me to your fiancée when you see her. You're certainly in luck. But say—some time I want you to meet Jess. She's a great girl, I tell you. And what she doesn't think of me! Say—it's an inspiration to a man to have a girl like that think you're it. By the way, I just happened to think there's a dear little girl in this town that I must look up before I leave—"

"Good afternoon, Mr. Harding. Can I do anything for you to-day?" asked Mr. D. Hobart Lingillet, as he nervously fingered his sample cases.

"What? You still representing L. C. Turner & Co.? You go back and tell 'em when they send a man—mind you, I said a man—out here to get my order I may do business with 'em again. That's all, sir!"

When Mr. Lingillet was two blocks down the street, he actually shook his fist at the cross man.

D. Hobart Lingillet stood before the door of the private office of the great "L. G." president of the Turner Door-knob concern. There was something about the knob on President Turner's door that fascinated, yet repelled, Mr. Lingillet. There wasn't a door-knob turned out by that vast manufactory that could inspire such unpleasant thoughts in the mere turning as that on President Turner's door—when somebody had been sent for. D. Hobart took hold of it gingerly, as if it were a live wire.

"Did you wish to speak to me, Mr. Turner?" inquired Mr. Lingillet, timidly presenting himself before the great "L. G."

"Brrrrrrh!" came from behind the big desk. President Turner seemed like Addison's description of a pun—"a sound, and nothing but a sound."

D. Hobart swallowed hard. It annoyed him to have his throat suddenly become so dry just because he was in the same room with "the Boss."

"Yes, sir," murmured D. Hobart, faintly.

He had lots of time, before the Boss again noticed him, to try standing first on one foot, then on the other.

"Brrrrrrh!" said the Boss, after he had signed several dozen letters. "Let's see—what's your name? Oh, yes, you're Dan Lingillet. I merely wanted to tell you, young man, that you've got to cut down that expense account of yours, and show a decided advance in your sales or—"

"Yes, sir, I understand. Thank you very much for giving me another chance, sir."

POULTRY DISEASES.

It Does Not Pay to Doctor Sick Fowls.

Time spent on disease infected flocks of poultry, as a general thing, is time wasted. This, of course, does not apply to local sporadic complaints that are easily checked and cured, but to diseases that are deeply rooted and infectious.

It is frequently the case that consumption in some form exists among poultry. It is almost hopeless to attempt to stamp out the disease, and the sooner such flocks are gotten rid of and healthy ones installed in their places the better.

Many breeders and farmers' wives whose fowls are affected, give three or four doses of kerosene, or some other home remedy, and then report that the medicine did not effect a cure. The fact is, it may be necessary to give medicine every couple of hours, and even oftener, in bad cases. This work, of course, is not agreeable to the owner, particularly if the birds are of little value.

When roup appears and does not give way to prompt and heroic treatment, and frequent dosing, the chances are that such fowls will always give trouble. In such cases it is a comparatively easy matter to begin anew with poultry.

The cheaper and safer way is to take all the affected birds to some locality, kill them, for sometimes the disease is deeply rooted in the blood of the fowls and will remain, says the Northwestern Agriculturist. The safest and best method, therefore, is to clear off all the old stock and thoroughly disinfect the premises, even to spading the yards.

After this is done, get new stock from a flock that is known to be healthy, vigorous and free from disease, and see that none but healthy fowls are admitted to the breeding yard thereafter.

NEVER WEAR OUT.

Concrete Corner-Blocks for Hive Stands Are the Best.

The blocks are made five inches square on the bottom, 5½ inches high. The top, or where the hive rests, is three inches by 1½. These cost me three cents apiece, are much cheaper than wooden stands, and are practically indestructible, besides presenting a very neat appearance. You will see that the hive rests upon such a small surface that there is small chance for dampness to collect to rot the bottom-board.

Since I have used these hive-stands, says a writer in Bee Culture, they have given me such satisfaction that I would not return to wooden stands, even for the few hives I have; and it seems to me they would be economical, even for the large apiary, as they can be made by anyone who can get cement and gravel.

Paint Coops with Crude Oil.

If we ever have occasion to build another hen house, the thing we shall do after completing it, and before any hens are allowed in it, will be to paint the whole inside with crude oil. The roosts and around the roosts should be given a double coat. A barrel of the oil should cost not over $3.50, barrel included, and what is left can either be sold or used for machine oil. Anyway, if it costs $3.50, to paint the inside of the house, we feel sure it would be money well invested, and would mean a comparative freedom from mites for some time to come.

Grind Them Up.

Now that nearly every housewife has a meat grinder in her kitchen—don't throw away a single bit of outside cabbage leaf, turnip peeling, apple peeling or core, or even potato peeling. Grind them up with celery tops, turnip sprouts, and everything else that is vegetable, and give them to the hens. It is surprising how much hens will eat of things that they have the reputation of never touching, if the food is cut or ground to convenient sized mouthfuls for them. And, remember, they repay it all with eggs.

Fed Mashies in Morning.

When considered advisable to feed mashies or soft feed to poultry the best time to give it to them is for the early morning meal. Even with little chickens it is best to feed small or cracked grains at night, while the older fowls should have whole grain. Many of the small flocks become too fat because every meal permits of scraps being obtained, which are thrown out as fast as accumulated, usually three times a day, and the hens never being hungry patiently sit around and wait for more.

Growing Poultry Feed.

In growing food for poultry it should be borne in mind that corn, wheat and oats can always be purchased and it is best therefore to grow sorghum, broomcorn, popcorn, millet and sunflowers for seed, which afford a good variety, but cannot be so readily procured in market.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR?

THE future of the American Federation of Labor?

The question was put to Frank Morrison, secretary of the great labor organization. "If the American Federation is the ultimate form in which labor shall unite to press its case against capital—that is, to preserve itself and prosecute its advances in the struggle of human development—then I think I can answer that question in a few words," he said. "We think it is; we think it is an ideal form of organization, just as we as Americans think that our mobile form of government in the United States is the best form of government. No man who is other than a fool, however, thinks the government of the United States is a perfect government. Most of us realize that it is very far from perfect."

"That which makes this government the best on earth is not only the greater freedom that it guarantees, but its mobility, its ready adaptability to new measures and methods, the provision at hand by which a change, even the most radical change, may be effected with the only essential condition that the majority of the people want the change. There's the rub. But no sensible man would remove that very heavy and lagging weight that forever clogs the way of progress—the necessity of leaving the whole lump."

"Leaders fret because of the slow march to a goal that seems so bright, so desirable and so ready at hand, if only the hand would reach out to

ular brand of the spirit of liberty has reserved for modern eyes. Only by union can headway be made by poverty-stricken individuals against the intrenchments and fortifications of capital. Organize, organize, organize. Organize unions, unite these unions together into other unions, and these unions into still other unions, one intrenched behind and reinforced by the others; drill, discipline, educate—educate every man to know his rights and the rights as well as the power of capital, to know what to ask for and what not to ask for, to know when to ask, to know when to substitute the word 'demand' for 'request,' and finally and most vitally, to know how to enforce that demand. That is the American Federation of Labor. It is the greatest labor organization of the world."

"They will tell you that the interests of labor and capital are identical, that they should live together in peace and harmony; the welfare of one is the welfare of the other, and all that. Of course it is. To the unbiased this is as fundamental as the truth of organization. But the trouble is that capital, like labor, is primarily ignorant—especially is capital ignorant of this fact. It can't be taught without demonstration. It lacks the point of view, and no lesson is so hard to instill as that. It is warm and well fed and it is labor that makes it so. The more subservient and the cheaper the labor on the one hand, the more wealth and luxury on the other. How can the beneficiary of such a condition understand that the increase of wages, the reduction of the hours of labor, the general uplift take it. But so did they who undertook those reforms that resulted in the French revolution. They got rid of the impediment, but the yeast worked too fast, caused the batter to run over and spoiled the bread. We want none of that."

"Experience teaches that the steady progress that is thoroughly grounded in the best progress. The flag that is slowly advancing with an intrenched army behind it maintains its position. By all this I simply mean to say that the many failures of the past have not been lost upon trades unionism, for they teach patience in what may seem to be slow progress and that ultimate, complete success of the movement is more assured by our being thorough as we go along. The work we have to do is to educate. 'Organize! organize! organize!' is the slogan, but organization is the first means toward education. It is the class, the school. It is the first essential. It is the first impulse of the awakening mind. The minute the working man realizes that he is a man and not a slave he calls to his fellows to unite with him for betterment."

"United they begin to devise ways and means. They plan how they may secure this and that that they know, as men and not as slaves, they should have—that belongs to them by right. They are at an immense disadvantage because they are not only without means, dependent upon the power they are attacking, but more than all else, they are inexperienced, ignorant. They make mistakes and are humiliated and their organizations broken and scattered and they are individually made to suffer and are reduced to still more abject poverty. The weaker among them are made weaker and more timid still, but the naturally strong are developed in strength and grow in wisdom. They see wherein the weakness of their former movement lay and they go among their fellows and point it out to them. They see even as they did not see before that only through uniting can they ever be emancipated from their state of slavery."

of his employees, is to his benefit? He cannot see it. To him this great truth must remain forever obscure."

The securing of right and justice to one man better the whole world. Raise the level of an intelligence and manhood of the great mass of the people and the world will be a so much better place to live in that men will scarcely recognize it for the place that it was; those that had the best there was before will discover joys they never dreamed of. When every man is a real man, carrying his head up with ideas and knowledge in it, wearing proper flesh on his bones and clothes to cover it; when every woman, through the means of education, environment and relief from overwork and worry becomes a beautiful and intelligent 'lady,' when children, all children, may be properly cared for and sent to school until they have acquired a good education, will not compensation have been rendered to the privileged and pampered few for what has been filched from them in the form of their exclusive caste? That is the whole story. That is the end toward which the American Federation of Labor is working—and working now with considerable speed."

"I see a time, as the result of our agitation and persistent effort, when no child shall be set to work, and children and youth shall go to school until they are 18 years of age; when every man's child shall have the benefit of a high school education; when men shall be so well paid that they can afford to marry and rear children and provide for them properly and see to their education; when, because of this, women will be taken out of the field of competition by finding husbands and homes; when every man and woman will find time to loaf a little and invite his soul, and life will mean something more than a day of toil; when strikes and lockouts will no longer be used as a weapon between employer and employed, because of a mutual respect and a better understanding. This is the good time toward which the American Federation of Labor is looking and working, and I think we shall see it in our day."

CRITICISM NOT SO SEVERE

By Willis J. Abbott.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—In discussing with a friend his determination to issue the proclamation granting statehood to Oklahoma, President Roosevelt said certain things that are much at odds with the reports of his views on the matter. For example, that much berated "gerrymander."

Mr. Roosevelt looked upon this from the standpoint of a practical man. He remarked that it might be bad, but it could not be as bad as some with which he had had experience in New York, and had had knowledge of in other northern republican states. Nor did he express any objection to the initiative and referendum clause in the constitution, that feature which the unfortunate Taft attacked and then fled to Asia, where the people don't take any part in governing themselves. My informant tells me—we can't quote the president directly, you know—that Mr. Roosevelt approves the system of direct legislation for cities, counties and states, but fears it is too cumbersome for the nation.

Nor did the president, in this interview, express any of that hostility to the constitutional prohibition of government by injunction, which Secretary Taft attacked so bitterly. People here in Washington are wondering whether Taft was sent out to test public sentiment on this issue, or whether he was merely dispatched like a lamb to the slaughter.

All that Roosevelt has said to the half score men who talked to him upon the subject today has been in direct contradiction of all that Secretary Taft said in his ill-advised speech, a speech the substance of which the president must have known before its delivery. Certain of the constitution's provisions, the president applauds unreservedly, notably that prohibiting campaign funds from corporations, and that compelling candidates for office to make sworn statements as to their expenses for any perjury committed.

Among those who saw the president today was F. S. Monett of Ohio, whose long fight on the Standard Oil company has made him a national figure. Mr. Monett told the president that part of the republican disaster in Oklahoma was due to the subservience of the rough rider governor to the Standard Oil interests. Without criticizing Governor Frantz, Mr. Roosevelt is said to have expressed the opinion that there might have been a more vigorous campaign against the "octopus."

If the official copy of the constitution and report of the election are re-published on his trip to the mid-land will be issued at once. Otherwise, the proclamation of statehood may be delayed until the middle of October.

The pressure for place has begun already. One of the first callers at the White House was former Senator James K. Jones of Arkansas, who urged the appointment of Judge Thomas C. Humphreys of Oklahoma to the federal bench when the territory shall be made a state.

Lumber Companies Fined.

Guthrie, Sept. 28.—On indictments charging entering into a combination in restraint of trade, pleas of guilty were made yesterday at Pond Creek in the federal court by the Minnetonka Lumber Company, the Gloyd Lumber Company and Crowell Bros. Lumber Company, all of Alva, and each company paid into court a fine of $2,000 and costs. The cases were transferred to Pond Creek on a change of venue from Woods county, the indictments being under the Sherman Anti-Trust law. These are the first convictions under the law in Oklahoma.

The indictments are also pending against lumber companies at Newkirk and Guthrie. The Amaden company is owned partially by Wichita, Kas., parties. United States District Attorney John Embury prosecuted the cases.

No fight will be made to prevent officers elected by the voters from entering upon their duties as soon as Oklahoma has been proclaimed a state by President Roosevelt.

This is virtually the announcement made by Governor Frank Frantz here tonight. He said:

"It is my opinion that the newspaper reports that President Roosevelt has promised to sign the constitution are true. I have called off a several days' visit with the National Guard, Memphis and accompany him to Louisiana now in camp at Fort Reno, and will not leave."

"O. Hobart" Lingillet--Representing a Door-knob Firm

"What's your line?" asked D. Hobart Lingillet of the only other occupant of the smoker. Mr. Lingillet was sorry for a man who preferred "taking from" and "adding to" in a note book to being entertained by such a general favorite in society as himself. D. Hobart was a "regular case" when he got started. It looked promising when the other man closed his book with a frown. Mr. Lingillet was ready with a cigar.

"Miss's door-knobs," interrupted D. Hobart. "L. G. Turner & Co. Fine people to be with—treat you white. I've been with 'em now going on two years, and I couldn't ask for better treatment. Had lots of chances to go with other concerns, but Mr. Firm wouldn't hear of it. Funny part of it is I'm independent as a pig on ice. I say what I think, whether it's to the boss or anyone else. And I get away with it, too. 'Why, B. G. and the stockholders will take anything from me' Now, for instance, I said to the boss, 'Look at this—'

POULTRY DISEASES.

It Does Not Pay to Doctor Sick Fowls.

Time spent on disease infected flocks of poultry, as a general thing, is time wasted. This, of course, does not apply to local sporadic complaints that are easily checked and cured, but to diseases that are deeply rooted and infectious.

It is frequently the case that consumption in some form exists among poultry. It is almost hopeless to attempt to stamp out the disease, and the sooner such flocks are gotten rid of and healthy ones installed in their places the better.

Many breeders and farmers' wives whose fowls are affected, give three or four doses of kerosene, or some other home remedy, and then report that the medicine did not effect a cure. The fact is, it may be necessary to give medicine every couple of hours, and even oftener, in bad cases. This work, of course, is not agreeable to the owner, particularly if the birds are of little value.

When roup appears and does not give way to prompt and heroic treatment, and frequent dosing, the chances are that such fowls will always give trouble. In such cases it is a comparatively easy matter to begin anew with poultry.

The cheaper and safer way is to take all the affected birds to some locality, kill them, for sometimes the disease is deeply rooted in the blood of the fowls and will remain, says the Northwestern Agriculturist. The safest and best method, therefore, is to clear off all the old stock and thoroughly disinfect the premises, even to spading the yards.

After this is done, get new stock from a flock that is known to be healthy, vigorous and free from disease, and see that none but healthy fowls are admitted to the breeding yard thereafter.

NEVER WEAR OUT.

Concrete Corner-Blocks for Hive Stands Are the Best.

The blocks are made five inches square on the bottom, 5 1/4 inches high. The top or where the hive rests, is three inches by 1 1/4. These cost me three cents apiece, are much cheaper than wooden stands, and are practically indestructible, besides presenting a very neat appearance. You will see that the hive rests upon such a small surface that there is small chance for dampness to collect to rot the bottom-board.

Since I have used these hive stands, says a writer in Bee Culture, they have given me such satisfaction that I would not return to wooden stands even for the few lives I have and it seems to me they would be economical, even for the large apiary, as they can be made by anyone who can get cement and gravel.

Paint Coops with Crude Oil.

If we ever have occasion to build another hen house, the thing we shall do after completing it, and before any hens are allowed in it will be to paint the whole inside with crude oil. The roosts and around the roosts should be given a double coat. A barrel of the oil should cost not over $3.50 barrel included, and what is left can either be sold or used for machine oil. Anyway if it costs $3.50 to paint the inside of the house, we feel sure it would be money well invested and would mean a comparative freedom from mites for some time to come.

Grind Them Up.

Now that nearly every housewife has a meat grinder in her kitchen—don't throw away a single bit of outside cabbage leaf, turnip peeling, apple peeling or core, or even potato peeling. Grind them up with celery tops, turnip sprouts, and everything else that is vegetable, and give them to the hens. It is surprising how much hens will eat of things that they have the reputation of never touching. If the food is cut or ground to convenient sized mouthfuls for them. And, remember, they repay it all with eggs.

Fed Mashers in Morning.

When considered advisable to feed mashers or soft feed to poultry the best time to give it to them is for the early morning meal. Even with little chickens it is best to feed small or cracked grains at night, while the old or fowls should have whole grain. Many of the small flocks become too fat because every meal permits of scraps being obtained, which are thrown out as fast as accumulated, usually three times a day, and the hens never being hungry patiently sit around and wait for more.

Growing Poultry Feed.

In growing food for poultry it should be borne in mind that corn, wheat and oats can always be purchased and it is best therefore to grow sorghum, broomcorn, popcorn millet and sunflowers for seed, which afford a good variety, but cannot be so readily procured in market.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR?

THE future of the American Federation of Labor?

The question was put to Frank Morrison, secretary of the great labor organization. "If the American Federation is the ultimate form in which labor shall unite to press its case against capital—that is, to preserve itself and prosecute its advances in the struggle of human development—then I think I can answer that question in a few words," he said. "We think it is; we think it is an ideal form of organization, just as we as Americans think that our mobile form of government in the United States is the best form of government. No man who is other than a fool, however, thinks the government of the United States is a perfect government. Most of us realize that it is very far from perfect."

That which makes this government the best on earth is not only the greater freedom that it guarantees but its mobility, its ready adaptability to new measures and methods, the provision at hand by which a change, even the most radical change, may be effected with the only essential condition that the majority of the people want the change. There's the rub. But no sensible man would remove that very heavy and lagging weight that forever clogs the way of progress—the necessity of leaving the whole lump.

Leaders fret because of the slow march to a goal that seems so bright, so desirable and so ready at hand, if only the hand would reach out to

ular brand of the spirit of liberty has reserved for modern eyes. Only by union can headway be made by poverty stricken individuals against the intrenchments and fortifications of capital. Organize, organize, organize. Organize, unions, unite these unions together into other unions, and these unions into still other unions, one intrenched behind and reinforced by the others; drill, discipline, educate—educate every man to know his rights and the rights as well as the power of capital, to know what to ask for and what not to ask for, to know when to ask, to know when to substitute the word 'demand' for 'request,' and finally and most vitally, to know how to enforce that demand. That is the American Federation of Labor. It is the greatest labor organization of the world.

"They will tell you that the interests of labor and capital are identical, that they should live together in peace and harmony; the welfare of one is the welfare of the other, and all that. Of course it is. To the unbiased this is as fundamental as the truth of organization. But the trouble is that capital, like labor, is primarily ignorant—especially is capital ignorant of this fact. It can't be taught without demonstration. It lacks the point of view, and no lesson is so hard to instill as that. It is warm and well fed and it is labor that makes it so. The more subservient and the cheaper the labor on the one hand, the more wealth and luxury on the other. How can the beneficiary of such a condition understand that the increase of wages, the reduction of the hours of labor, the general uplift take it that so did they who under took those reforms that resulted in the French revolution. They got rid of the impediment, but the yeast worked too fast, caused the batter to run over and spoiled the bread. We want none of that.

Experience teaches that the steady progress that is thoroughly grounded in the best progress. The flag that is slowly advancing with an intrenched army behind it maintains its position. It is all this I simply mean to say that the many failures of the past have not been lost upon trades unionism, for they teach patience in what may seem to be slow progress and that ultimate, complete success of the movement as more assured by our being thorough as we go along. The work we have to do is to educate. Organize! organize! organize! is the slogan, but organization is the first means toward education. It is the class, the school. It is the first essential. It is the first impulse of the awakening mind. The minute the working man realizes that he is a man and not a slave he casts to his fellows to unite with him for betterment.

United they begin to devise ways and means. They plan how they may secure this and that that they know, as men and not as slaves, they should have—that belongs to them by right. They are at an immense disadvantage because they are not only without means, dependent upon the power they are attacking, but more than all else, they are inexperienced, ignorant. They make mistakes and are humiliated and their organizations broken and scattered and they are individually made to suffer and are reduced to still more abject poverty. The weaker among them are made weaker and more timid still, but the naturally strong are developed in strength and grow in wisdom. They see wherein the weakness of their former movement lay and they go among their fellows and point it out to them. They see even as they did not see before that only through uniting can they ever be emancipated from their state of slavery.

"That is so fundamental a truth that it is patent. No one disputes. When the non-union man frets at what he calls the domination of the union he forms a union to oppose it. This is the amazing spectacle that this partic-

of his employees, is to his benefit." He cannot see it. To him this great truth must remain forever obscure.

The securing of right and justice to one man better the whole world. Raise the level of an intelligence and manhood of the great mass of the people and the world will be a so much better place to live in than men will scarcely recognize it for the place that it was, those that had the best there was before will discover joys they never dreamed of. When every man is a real man, carrying his head up with ideas and knowledge in it, wearing proper flesh on his bones and clothes to cover it, when every woman, through the means of education, environment and relief from overwork and worry becomes a beautiful and intelligent "lady," when children, all children, may be properly cared for and sent to school until they have acquired a good education, will not compensation have been rendered to the privileged and pampered few for what has been siphoned from them in the form of their exclusive caste? That is the whole story. That is the end toward which the American Federation of Labor is working—and working now with considerable speed.

"I see a time, as the result of our agitation and persistent effort, when no child shall be set to work, and children and youth shall go to school until they are 18 years of age; when every man's child shall have the benefit of a high school education; when men shall be so well paid that they can afford to marry and rear children and provide for them properly and see to their education, when, because of this, women will be taken out of the field of competition by finding husbands and homes, when every man and woman will find time to loaf a little 'and invite his soul,' and life will mean something more than a day of toil, when strikes and lockouts will no longer be used as a weapon between employer and employed, because of a mutual respect and a better understanding. This is the good time toward which the American Federation of Labor is looking and working, and I think we shall see it in our day."

CRITICISM NOT SO SEVERE

By Willis J. Abbott.
Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—In discussing with a friend his determination to issue the proclamation granting statehood to Oklahoma, President Roosevelt said certain things that are much at odds with the reports of his views on the matter. For example, that much berated "gerrymander."
Mr. Roosevelt looked upon this from the standpoint of a practical man. He remarked that it might be bad, but it could not be as bad as some with which he had had experience in New York, and had had knowledge of in other northern republican states. Nor did he express any objection to the initiative and referendum clause in the constitution, that feature which the unfortunate Taft attacked and then fled to Asia, where the people don't take any part in governing themselves. My informant tells me—we can't quote the president directly, you know—that Mr. Roosevelt approves the system of direct legislation for cities, counties and state, but fears it is too cumbersome for the nation.

Nor did the president, in this interview, express any of that hostility to the constitutional prohibition of government by injunction, which Secretary Taft attacked so bitterly. People here in Washington are wondering whether Taft was sent out to test public sentiment on this issue, or whether he was merely dispatched like a lamb to the slaughter.
All that Roosevelt has said to the half score men who talked to him upon the subject today has been in direct contradiction of all that Secretary Taft said in his ill-advised speech, a speech the substance of which the president must have known before its delivery. Certain of the constitution's provisions, the president applauds unreservedly, notably that prohibiting campaign funds from corporations, and that compelling candidates for office to make sworn statements as to their expenses for any perjury committed.

Among those who saw the president today was F. S. Monett of Ohio, whose long fight on the Standard Oil company has made him a national figure. Mr. Monett told the president that part of the republican disaster in Oklahoma was due to the subservience of the rough rider governor to the Standard Oil interests. Without criticizing Governor Frantz, Mr. Roosevelt is said to have expressed the opinion that there might have been a more vigorous campaign against the "cetopna."

If the official copy of the constitution and report of the election are re-published, the president starts on his trip to the territory will be issued at once. Otherwise, he will be delayed until the middle of October.

The pressure for place has begun already. One of the first callers at the White House was former Senator James K. Jones of Arkansas, who urged the appointment of Judge Thomas C. Humphreys of Oklahoma to the federal bench when the territory shall be made a state.

Lumber Companies Fined.

Guthrie, Sept. 28.—On indictments charging entering into a combination in restraint of trade, pleas of guilty were made yesterday at Pond Creek in the federal court by the Minnetonka Lumber Company, the Gloyd Lumber Company and Crowell Bros. Lumber Company, all of Alva, and each company paid into court a fine of $2,000 and costs. The cases were transferred to Pond Creek on a change of venue from Woods county, the indictments being under the Sherman Anti-trust law. These are the first convictions under the law in Oklahoma.

The indictments are also pending against lumber companies at Newkirk and Guthrie. The Amaden company is owned partially by Wichita, Kans., parties. United States District Attorney John Embury prosecuted the cases.

Frantz at Last Throws up the Sponge --Will at Once Prepare to Surrender Government to the Democrats. --Hunter to the Cane-Brakes With the President.

Guthrie, Sept. 27.—The republicans have abandoned the threatened con-ana hunting trip. I will accompany the president from Keokuk, Iowa, to the ground of irregularities in the re-ent election.

No fight will be made to prevent officers elected by the voters from entering upon their duties as soon as Oklahoma has been proclaimed a state by President Roosevelt.

This is virtually the announcement made by Governor Frank Frantz here tonight. He said:

"It is my opinion that the newspaper reports that President Roosevelt has promised to sign the constitution are true. I have called off a several days' visit with the National Guard, Memphis and accompany him to Louisiana. Now in camp at Fort Reno, and will not accompany the president on his Louisiana hunting trip. I will accompany the president from Keokuk, Iowa, to the ground of irregularities in the re-ent election. Then I will return home and get things in shape to turn over the Territorial administration to the newly elected state officers."

Gov. Frantz returned to Guthrie tonight from a week's visit in Missouri. Charles E. Hunter, chairman of the republican central committee, who conducted the losing fight for the republicans, and who was prepared to continue his fight against statehood, when the president announced that he intended to sign the Oklahoma constitution, will meet President Roosevelt at Memphis and accompany him to Louisiana.

Woman Gets Judgment Against W. J. Reed for Damages.

A very sensational case occurred in the district court yesterday, W. J. Reed, founder of Ada and prominent merchant and real estate owner at present, being sued for damages by one woman Cassie Coyle, who some time ago conducted a rooming house in one of Reed's Main street buildings. Miss Cassie Coyle sued this merchant for $2,000.00 damages, claiming she was maliciously beaten, knocked down and rendered unconscious by him. The woman plaintiff in this case testified that Reed came to the rooming house with two women and asked for a room for himself and one of the women and another room for the other woman and another man, to which the woman plaintiff declared she objected, whereupon, Mr. Reed became enraged and assaulted her with serious results from which she was confined to her room for several days. To induce further action Mr. Reed came to her rooming house with immoral intentions, Cassie Coyle stated, and that Reed entered her room with the woman of the rooming house.

It appears that it was proven to Mr. Reed that he was with whom he went to the rooming house had the definite intention of seducing the plaintiff, Cassie Coyle, to the prospective purchase because it was her disposition and that she became indignant and that she was not a party to any immoral act. Reed threatened to phone her wife, and attempt to have immoral conduct declared that when she did this he declared that she said what she threatened she would say what was untrue and that when he had threatened so much the Coyle woman struck him in the face whereupon he became involuntarily very angry and beat her one glancing blow in the face.

It appeared that the woman swore that she had been wronged by the City of Ada and that she had not struck him and further that Reed had unlawfully assaulted her in the rooming house which she was in and that she had been injured and that she was in the hospital for several days. The woman's testimony was corroborated by the testimony of the woman who was with her at the time of the assault. The woman who was with her at the time of the assault testified that she saw Reed strike the plaintiff in the face and that she saw Reed strike the plaintiff in the face.

The woman who was with her at the time of the assault testified that she saw Reed strike the plaintiff in the face and that she saw Reed strike the plaintiff in the face. The woman who was with her at the time of the assault testified that she saw Reed strike the plaintiff in the face and that she saw Reed strike the plaintiff in the face. The woman who was with her at the time of the assault testified that she saw Reed strike the plaintiff in the face and that she saw Reed strike the plaintiff in the face.

The speeches by the attorneys in the case to the jury, all of whom remained in their seats until the close fairly reeked with oratory. J. W. Bolen representing the defendant Reed drew a very feeling contrast between a lady and a woman who would abandon that proper and exalted position erected for her by man and descend to become a loud and common brawler. The plaintiff was represented by that lately associated strong firm of lawyers Stone and Huffer. All who heard acclaimed that Mr. Stone made an exceptionally strong and feeling argument. The case was closed by Judge Huffer in one of the most unrelenting arrangements of a man who would strike a woman's character ever heard in an Ada court.

It was a hard fought case and most certainly it is hoped that such character of cases will ever be few in our courts.

The Parnells to Leave.

The News joins the numerous other friends of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Parnell in hoping it may not be true, the report that they may soon leave Ada to become residents of Sulphur, hoping, on the contrary, that these popular people may continue to reside among us and conduct the Harris Hotel, now famous among the traveling public for its excellent accommodations.

Though Mr. Parnell does not say positively that he will leave Ada, he admits that he has taken a lease on the Artesian, Sulphur's magnificent hotel, and will soon assume full management of same.

The News man was down at Sulphur the other day, and was complimenting his friend—that splendid town builder, Clay Webster—on the many recent additions of value to that town, much of it attributed to the latter's genius and enterprise. It means the least of Mr. Webster's good strokes is his inducing E. B. Parnell to take charge of the Artesian. This hotel is a $100,000 structure, one of the handsomest in all Oklahoma and the biggest attraction except the mineral waters, in Sulphur. The success with which the great inn is conducted will in large measure determine the popularity of the spas. Mr. Parnell will make good when he and Mrs. Parnell move away. Ada will lose one of its most gentlemanly and progressive citizens and one of its most charming women.

OWIN, WYATT & CO. THE PATRONS OF THE ARTS

LIKE MEXICAN CHILE? Chile is always good, and palatable and healthful. But it is especially so during fall and winter. The chile season is now on.

Louis Lopez knows how. He learned to make it in Old Mexico. Get some at his chile parlor on North Broadway.

Also Short Orders and cold drinks served.

C. E. WYATT CITY DRAYMAN Handles Everything From a Pin to a Boiler. All work guaranteed. Your patronage solicited.
